This symphony, inspired by Schiller's "Ode to Joy," for more than thirty years slumbered in the imagination of the composer, the work having been written when Beethoven was over fifty years old.

The composer, it is said, seemed lost in a wild fervor of inspiration during in a wild fervor of inspiration during in some position; food and sleep were forgotte, and every faculty of his mind and spirk were bent on his labor. In this final symphony of Beethoven's, in which are emfodied the highest aspirations of the human mind. Beethoven has not used the whole of Schiller's words nor has he employed them in the order in which they stand in the poem. As poetry finds its fullest development in the drama, so does instrumental music in the symphony, which is the highest of all musical forms, because it demands from the composer an extraordinary amount of power and originality.

No event in local musical annals will stand out more prominently than the initial performance of Beethoven's Ninth, or Choral, Symphony, to be given by the Heinrich Hammer Symphony Orchestra at the Belasco Theater Friday afternoon. February 4, at 4:45.

PUPIL OF LISZT

The afternoon concert of the Phila-lelphia Orchestra, under the direction

The afternoon concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra, under the direction of Carl Pohlis, at the New National Theater on February 8, in addition to a very striking program, in which the symphonic feature will be Raff's "Forest" Symphony, will especially interest Washingtonians since Miss Flora Wilson, daughter of Secretary Wilson, will be heard with the orchestra.

Miss Wilson has just had a very successful concert at the Bellevue-Stratford, in Philadelphia, and will select some of the best numbers in her repertoire for her appearance with the orchestra. The concert will begin with Brahm's Variations on a Haydn theme, and will close with Liszts symphonic poem, "Tasso."

As a pupil of Liszt, and one who was intimately associated with him for years, Mr. Pohlig has made himself the authoritative exponent of Liszt's music in this country. In this connection it is interesting to know that last spring when Mr. Pohlig went to Italy he revisited Villa D'Este, at Tivoli, near Rome, one of the most famous Renaissance villas in Italy, where he spent six months with Liszt in student days.

Mr. Pohlig has the original scores of Liszt's great works, with the master's tempi and stresses marked in them, so that his readings are those that Liszt himself authorized. and will close with Liszt's symphonic poem, "Tasso."

Other numbers of interest are Arthur Norton Wight's overture, "The Taming of the Shrew," dedicated to H. C. Rakemann and the "Bolero" (Verdi's "Stellian Vespers"), which will be sung by Mrs. Shir-Cliff, soprano soloist for the concert.

TO EXECUTE DANCES OF CLASSIC GREEKS

Miss Maud Allan Will Interpret Music of Chopin and Other Composers.

Maud Alian, the dancer, will appear at the New National Theater Friday afternoon, February 4, at 4.20, in a revival of the classic Greek dance.

Miss Alian is famous by the grace and beauty of her dancing as well as by her charm and intelligence. She will interpret the "Meiody in F, by Rubinstein; three Chopin waltzes; the "Spring Song," by Mendelssohn; the "Peer Gynt" suite of Grieg; the "Marche Funebre" of Chopin, and "Waltz Caprice of Rubinstein.

The dancer will be assisted by the Russian Symphony Orchestra, Modest Altschuler, conductor.
